The Bryan Family

Featured in
"Pistols and Petticoats"

—Bob Andrews '67

The heroine's family from the junior class film production for "Pistols and Petticoats" is pictured at their log cabin home, which is in fact a country cottage at River Point Farms near Dayton where Professor Joseph Overholt resided.

Only the popcorn was missing when the class of '74 presented its full-length feature film, "Pistols and Petticoats," as the entertainment at the 1973 junior-senior banquet. Rather than spending a large amount of money on entertainment for the banquet, this year's junior class decided to produce, direct, film, and act in their own feature film. The result was an original, refreshing hour-long extravaganza that delighted the enthusiastic audience.

Cheering the hero and booing the villain, the crowd was continually amazed at the balance between old movie cliches and new twists in the plot.

Nothing was missing: villain with a mustache (Jon Eisenback); tall, goodlooking hero (Dave Seera); pretty heroine with long flowing hair (Jackie Bright); and family of the heroine complete with a young, bratty brother (Nancy Nofsinger, Nancy Bugg, Kathy Ballard, Susan Waddell, and Mark Shaver). Action, horses, fight scenes, tying the heroine to the railroad track, pushing the hero over the bridge into the creek—they were all there. And the audience loved it all the more because they knew the people on the screen.

The Bryan college family can be proud that it can produce such creative innovations. Phil

Ashworth '66, the director and junior class sponsor, filmed most of the action and helped the juniors with the 500 splices necessary to edit the flick.

The result was a grand evening's entertainment that would make outside, professional efforts seem amateurish in comparison. Bravo juniors!

Forced Into the Bryan Family

by Martin Collins '73

My first thoughts of Bryan were not very rosey. I came to Bryan by force. The year previous to my coming to Bryan, I had had a high old time at a state school. Bryan simply was a means by which Mom and Dad could keep an eye on me to prevent any more total failures like the ones that I had obtained at the state school. The only hope that I had was a promise that my parents had made when I entered Bryan. If my conduct and grades were satisfactory for two years at Bryan, I could finish up at the state school!

During my first year, I was persuaded to join the small, struggling band that was being formed, but other than the required functions and band I stayed as far away from Bryan College as possible.

Year number two found me a little bit happier because I was now acquainted with a few people and this was to be my final year away from state school! Everything seemed to roll along smoothly until fate brought my college career to a sudden halt. On October 31, 1969, as I was returning from a band concert at Bryan, I had an automobile accident that left me paralyzed from the chest down. An operation that followed two days later left me paralyzed from the neck down with no promise of any recovery. My beautiful world had come to a screeching halt.

During the next three months while I was confined to a hospital bed in Chattanooga, there was not one week that passed without scores of Bryan faculty, staff and administration members, students and friends of the college visiting my room, sending cards and letters and doing any and every thing that they could to make my days a little brighter.

I began to make gradual progress until February of 1970, when I was able to manipulate a wheelchair, I was transferred to a hospital in Memphis for rehabilitation. My spirits fell because I knew that my steady stream of visitors had ended.

I was soon proven wrong because although the stream of visitors did slow down it definitely did not end. I was really surprised when I was visited by Dr. Mercer on one occasion and Dr. McKinney on another. Imagine, two men as busy as a college president and the chairman of the Board of Trustees taking time out to visit me!!

My biggest surprise came on Easter weekend. From the cards and letters that my dear friends at Bryan had sent me, I knew that the choir tour that year was to be in West Tennessee and some of the Mid-Western states, but the thought of getting to see or hear them never entered my mind. On the Saturday before Easter, a chartered bus pulled up in front of the hospital. I was amazed when Dr. Greasby and the whole choir filed out of the bus and up to my floor. It did my heart good when they sang their tour program for me.

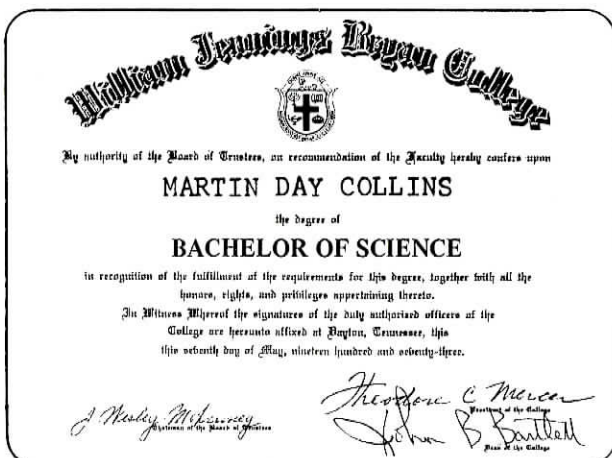

It wasn't long before I was released from the hospital and sent home for recovery. Once I got settled, I became anxious to return to Bryan. I had changed from a miserable student counting the days until I could return to state school, to a happy student in love with Bryan College. I did return to Bryan the next year, and the concern and helpfulness that poured out of my fellow students was overwhelming.

I became a Christian in my teens, but I had never really experienced the true Christian love between believers until I came to Bryan. I had always thought that the world was full of people who cared only for themselves. Bryan changed my mind by showing me that there were still plenty of people who cared.

Now, how would I change Bryan? Most of the major faults that could be changed within a few years have either already been changed while I have been at Bryan, or are in the process of changing. The only thing that could really be changed here at Bryan are some of the attitudes. On the faculty and administration side of the coin, attitudes should be changed from petty matters like the length of hair to more important matters like having a closer correlation between the number of classes and the number of teachers that we have to teach these classes. Next, on the student's side, as students we should stop criticizing and do a little toward solving the problems of a small school like Bryan.

Finally, both factions should remember that Bryan is still small and has many bridges to cross, and while trudging along helping Bryan to succeed, we must all do our best to promote our motto of "Christ Above All."

The Mini-Diploma pictured above is a facsimile of the pocket-size diplomas presented to each graduate by the Alumni Association at the May commencement.

DEATH

Dorene Palmer (wife of the late RAMON PALMER '56) died on April 25 following a two-weeks' illness in Honduras, where she served as a missionary for twelve years.

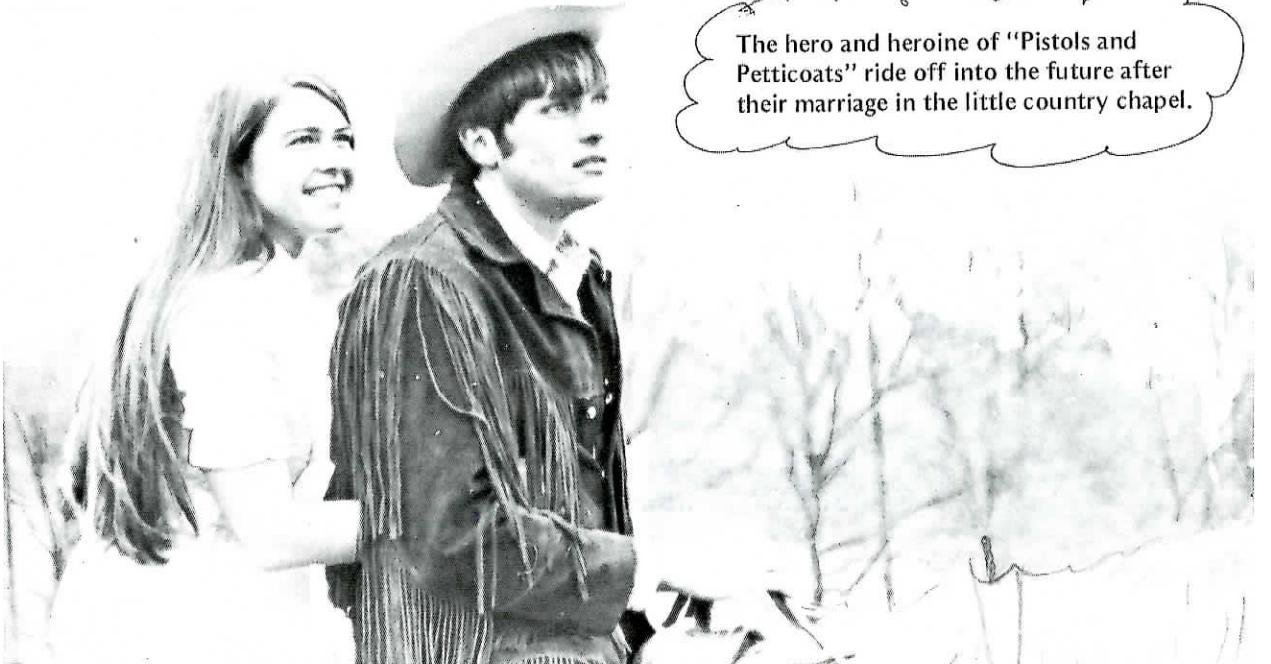

DR. ILA RUTH MAHR '48, left, is pictured above with an assistant, Mary Jo Hannaford, as they work with two participants in a special course under the Gwinnett County Schools psychological department in the Atlanta, Georgia, area.

Dr. Mahr and Mrs. Hannaford studied at the institute of Dr. Thomas A. Harris, author of I'm O.K., You're O.K., in Sacramento, California. They are working with small groups of parents, teachers, administrators and anyone else interested in personal growth, interpersonal relationships and communications. The over-all basic goal is to "become yourself, to overhaul your personality and hold yourself responsible for your life instead of blaming everyone else."

The picture by Chuck Vollertsen and the accompanying feature article were published in the Atlanta Journal and Constitution on Sunday, May 13.

The hero and heroine of "Pistols and Petticoats" ride off into the future after their marriage in the little country chapel.

This testimonial by Martin Collins, a member of the class of 1973, is one of four speeches that were selected for presentation at the commencement exercises on May 7 when 105 graduates were honored in the largest class to be graduated from Bryan College. Marty, who is also a graduate of Rhea Central High School of Dayton, Tennessee, is a business education major who plans to continue his studies in graduate school.

TRAVELING TROUPE PERFORMS IN FOUR CITIES

by Rachel Ross

Inspired by the leadership of Rachel Ross, assistant professor of speech at Bryan, the Bryan Hilltop Players introduced their Traveling Troupe as a unique feature of the dramatics club this year.

On three different occasions the group took the play, "Ten Miles to Jericho," to churches in the area. It was presented to the United Methodist Church in Dayton, the Central Presbyterian Church in Chattanooga, and on a weekend tour to North Carolina at the Mt. Carmel Baptist Church of Asheville and the First Baptist Church of Hendersonville. Following are the members of the Traveling Troupe: Charlie Hunnicutt, Fred Clark, Dave Austin, Kaye Williamson, Brenda Boggs, Bob Rudd, Nancy Adams, Dan Wright, Bonita Spencer, and Jerry Vassar. The success of this venture has lent support to the idea of sending the troupe on a summer tour next year.

"Ten Miles to Jericho," which takes its setting from the story of the Good Samaritan, portrays the wounded man in his encounter with the Priest and Levite who left him to die on the road.

This play with two other plays, "The Children's Story," which enacts the Communist takeover of a grade school classroom and "The War Prayer" by Mark Twain provided an evening's dramatic production at Bryan on February 17.

The three-act play presented this year, was The Curious Savage by John Patrick. Two performances were held on April 5 and 7 in the City School Auditorium. The "curious" heroine of its title is a wealthy widow who decides to put her late husband's fortune in a "Happiness Fund," devoted to helping people do the foolish things they have always dreamed of. She arranged, for example, to import a box of soil from Italy to satisfy a gardener's sentimental desire for some earth from his native land. Her stepchildren, horrified at such nonsensical uses of the money they expect to inherit, have the generous Mrs. Savage clapped in a high-class sanitarium. In this retreat from the world she organizes society's misfits into a band of happy people who would not think of leaving their secure home.

The officers for Hilltop Players this year were: Keith Patman, president, sophomore from Kensington, Maryland; Bonita Spencer, vice president, junior from Asheville, North Carolina; Debbie Baker, corresponding secretary, junior from Stanley, Virginia; Doretha Roach, secretary, senior from Hayesville, North Carolina, and Patti Baker, treasurer, sophomore from Orlando, Florida.

Says Miss Ross of her first year as Director of the Hilltop Players, "It has been a most enjoyable year. I cannot say enough for the students who have been active in the club. Their loyalty, faithfulness, and hard work have helped us to live up to our verse and motto: 'Whether therefore ye eat, drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God' (I Cor. 10:31). We desire that the production of each play might be a means of using our talents to glorify God."
